Calling all poets who love space... and space enthusiasts who love poetry:
your tour is about to begin!

This eye-opening collection of poems about things astronauts have left on the moon invites readers to linger and wonder on every page.

Discover humankind's trash and treasure on the moon, including those iconic footprints; two golf balls; a hammer; falcon feather; peace pin; space junk; and so much more!

"The poetry and facts complement each other and make for a nice flow of information and fun....A lovely picture book that mixes poetry and history about the moon." -School Library Journal

About the Author

Irene Latham is a grateful creator of many books, including the co-authored African Town, winner of the Scott O'Dell Award; *Can I Touch Your Hair?
